Homerun is a vertically integrated company driving green energy innovation through high-purity quartz (HPQ) silica technologies. Controlling the full value chain, Homerun operates two key divisions: Advanced Materials, developing a 120,000 tpy silica processing plant and zero-waste purification tech with UC Davis; and Energy Solutions, building Latin America's first 365,000 tpy solar glass facility and advancing perovskite solar tech. The company also offers AI-driven energy management systems and partners with the U.S. DOE/NREL on long-duration energy storage. With six silica-based profit centers, Homerun supports the global energy transition through sustainable, high-impact solutions. Top of Form

Here are 5 key data points from their June 12th news release titled, “Homerun Resources Inc. Selected by BNDES and FINEP for Strategic Minerals Transformation Funding”:

- Selected for Strategic Funding: Homerun Resources has been chosen by Brazil’s BNDES and FINEP to advance to the Detailed Work Plan (DWP) phase of the R$5 billion (USD ~$815 million) Strategic Minerals Transformation Initiative—out of 124 proposals submitted.
- Exclusive Silica/Silicon Focus: Homerun is the only silica/silicon-focused company selected, highlighting its unique position in Brazil’s strategic minerals landscape.
- Funding Potential: If its DWP is approved, Homerun may access various financial instruments including long-term loans, equity investment, non-repayable funds, and subsidies to advance the Belmonte Silica Project and related processing facilities.
- Project Scope: The funding will support industrial-scale solar glass production, silica purification technologies, and workforce development, aligned with Brazil’s green energy and industrialization goals.

- National and Regional Impact: This selection positions Homerun as a key contributor to Brazil's energy transition, with support from the federal government, the state of Bahia, and the New Industry Brazil initiative—intended to boost low-carbon, sustainable mineral supply chains.
