

Troy Boisjoli of Murchison Minerals on the Nickel, Copper, and Cobalt HPM Project in Quebec

written by InvestorNews | March 28, 2023

In this InvestorIntel interview during PDAC 2023, Chris Thompson talks with Troy Boisjoli, CEO, President, and Director of Murchison Minerals Ltd. (TSXV: MUR | OTCQB: MURMF) about its HPM project in Quebec that contains a nickel, copper, and cobalt mineralization.

Troy states that HPM is a magmatic sulfide project with nickel, copper, and cobalt, and a deposit model that is similar to what you would find at Voisey's Bay. He adds that the HPM project is located in the Manicouagan region of Quebec, an area with advanced infrastructure including a heavy rail line, hydroelectric facility, and road access.

He also discussed recent good drill results of 277 meters of 5.01% nickel equivalent ("NiEq") at the Syrah target and 120 meters of 1.36% NiEq at the Barre de Fer zone.

Finally, he mentioned that exploration plans for 2023 include drilling to expand the Barre de Fer zone and to "drive discovery" along a five-kilometer trend that already has nickel-bearing sulfide mineralization identified on the surface.
