

F3 Uranium's Dev Randhawa says "The Athabasca is the place to be"

written by InvestorNews | July 4, 2024

July 4, 2024 – In a recent interview with Pat Bolland, Dev Randhawa, CEO and Chairman of F3 Uranium Corp. (TSXV: FUU | OTCQB: FUUFF), discussed the company's strategic moves and recent discoveries in the Athabasca Basin, a region known for its high-grade uranium deposits. F3 Uranium, which currently holds 20 projects in the basin, recently acquired additional land to consolidate their holdings near the Patterson Lake North area. Randhawa emphasized the importance of the Athabasca Basin, stating, "The Athabasca is the place to be," and highlighted the company's strategy to control key areas, notably on the west side of the basin where significant uranium deposits such as Arrow and Triple R are located.

The interview also delved into the recent winter drilling program, which yielded promising results in the JR Zone. Randhawa noted that they hit a high-grade zone, with one drill hole returning 12.0 meters of 7.6% U308, including an ultra-high-grade core of 2.0 meters at 31.4% U308. He remarked, "The JR Zone is unbelievable. It's the best exploration project in the basin if grade and depth matter." The ongoing exploration aims to prove the system's potential, with continuous drilling expected throughout the year. The recent \$10 million raised through private placement will support these efforts, enabling the company to further explore and potentially expand their high-grade discoveries in the basin.
