

John Cash of Ur-Energy talks about site construction and uranium as a key carbon-free fuel

written by InvestorNews | May 27, 2022

In this InvestorIntel interview with host Tracy Weslosky, Ur-Energy Inc.'s (NYSE American: URG | TSX: URE) CEO John Cash talks about the rapid progress being made at its Lost Creek uranium project and the importance of uranium as a carbon-free fuel.

In the interview, which can also be viewed in full on the InvestorIntel YouTube channel (click here), John talks about the rapid construction program underway at Ur-Energy's Lost Creek made possible by the Company having pre-ordered and purchased well installation and other materials for additional header houses, as well as plans for building its own local manufacturing site and laboratory. John also discusses testing innovative techniques that could significantly reduce drill rig time for injection wells, along with reducing associated costs and environmental impacts.

John also talks about uranium being an important part of the carbon free story going forward, and how "we believe we are truly at the tip of the spear with regard to that because we sell it to U.S. utilities and it produces carbon free energy," greatly reducing the emission of greenhouse gases.
