written by InvestorNews | August 14, 2024

August 14, 2024 – In a recent interview with InvestorNews host Pat Bolland, John Carter, CEO and Director of Silver Bullet Mines Corp. (TSXV: SBMI | OTCQB: SBMCF), provided insights into the company's near-term production plans and ongoing developments at its key mining projects. Carter discussed the progress at the Buckeye Mine in Arizona, where the company is finalizing compliance requirements under MSHA and making significant advancements toward reaching the high-grade mineralization zone. "We're very close in the Buckeye to starting regular production," Carter shared, highlighting that the mine's infrastructure is nearly ready, with upgraded equipment and an enhanced milling circuit to handle the ore, which contains both silver and copper.

Carter also delved into the history and potential of the Washington Mine in Idaho, which dates back to the late 1800s. He emphasized the property's rich history and its significant silver and gold deposits, noting that despite past challenges, "We know it's there." The company is preparing to start a new adit approximately 80 feet from the known mineralized zone, aiming to access material that previously produced high-grade silver. In parallel, SBMI is considering third-party milling opportunities, a strategic move that could provide additional revenue streams. "It's almost like gravy on roast beef," Carter remarked, underscoring the potential profitability of processing ore from nearby sources. The company is also actively evaluating various milling setups to optimize recovery rates for different types of ore, ensuring the facility can efficiently handle a variety of inputs.

About Silver Bullet Mines Corp.

Silver Bullet Mines Corp. (SBMI) is making headway in the gold and silver production industry. SBMI recently revealed a third potential revenue stream through a partnership to process around 900 pounds of high-grade gold concentrate at its Globe, Arizona facility, benefiting from its advanced gravity circuit. Besides this, SBMI's primary operations focus on silver extraction from the Buckeye Silver Mine and silver/gold production at its Washington Mine in Idaho, to be processed at its fully operational mill. The company recently reported promising high-grade silver findings from the Treasure Room and is working on a financing strategy for its operations. An ambitious goal is to stabilize the Treasure Room for deeper exploration. Another highlight was the successful interception of a mineral-rich zone at the Buckeye Mine, known as "Zone1," believed to contain higher-grade silver. The company plans to continue mining this vein and refine the material at its Globe mill. Recent developments position SBMI as a leading player in silver mining, suggesting a bright future for the company and its investors.
