The Critical Minerals Institute (CMI) Sponsors a Rare Earths and Uranium Stockwatch on InvestorNews.com

written by Raj Shah | May 2, 2024

May 02, 2024 – The Critical Minerals Institute (CMI) is pleased to announce a partnership in the buildout and activation of the Critical Minerals Stockwatch, a new platform designed to track rare earths, and uranium companies in the public markets. Accessible on the navigation bar on InvestorNews.com, a well known source for independent market coverage, the Critical Minerals Stockwatch showcases the companies entering the rare earths and uranium race for sustainable supply chains.

The Critical Minerals Stockwatch may be accessed directly through the following links effective immediately:

- Rare Earths Stockwatch
- Uranium Stockwatch

Rare Earth Elements (REEs), which have long been recognized as crucial minerals in the green economy, are necessary for high-tech, energy, electronics, electric vehicles, and defense applications. The CMI highlights their importance, noting that REEs' are included in eight out of nine globally recognized critical mineral lists that the CMI monitors.

The CMI monitors the following lists:

1. USA DOE Critical Minerals List – 2023

2. USA USGS Critical Minerals List – 2022
3. Canadian Critical Minerals List – 2022
4. Australian Critical Minerals List – 2023
5. Australian Strategic Materials List – 2023
6. UK Critical Minerals List – 2022
7. EU Critical Minerals List – 2023
8. Japanese Critical Minerals List – 2021
9. South Korean Critical Minerals List – 2020

InvestorNews' CEO Tracy Weslosky comments: "While uranium is currently only listed on the Canadian critical minerals list, we deem demand for uranium to be explosive. Additionally, rising investor interest, motivated by geopolitically charged issues around building sustainability is evident through the InvestorNews readership. The CMI regards will be discussing these related topics at our upcoming CMI Summit III in Toronto on August 21-22, 2024."

InvestorNews Inc. introduced CMI in 2022 as a pivotal industry resource, offering expert insights and hosting the annual Critical Minerals Institute Summit. Furthermore, InvestorNews has been instrumental in tracking critical mineral market dynamics through its watch list, a key tool for investors.

The inauguration of the Critical Minerals Stockwatch on InvestorNews.com addresses the growing prominence of new entities in the rare earths and uranium markets.

The Rare Earths and Uranium Stockwatch segments are designed to simplify market trend analysis and spur investor interest by translating news into actionable insights. These tools underscore the commitment of InvestorNews and Energy Fuels Inc. (NYSE American: UUUU | TSX: EFR) to enhance investor education and informed decision-making in the critical minerals sphere.
