

Antimony Resources Corp. (ATMY) (ATMYF) (K8J0) Wishes to Clarify Some Recent Reporting in Press Releases and in the November 7, 2025 Technical Report

written by Raj Shah | March 2, 2026

March 2, 2026 (Source) – Antimony Resources Corp. (CSE: ATMY) (OTCQB: ATMYF) (FSE: K8J0) (the “Company” or “Antimony Resources” or “ATMY”) reports as a result of a review by the British Columbia Securities Commission (BCSC), the Company is issuing the following news release to clarify its disclosure with respect to the Bald Hill Antimony Project.

The Company’s Bald Hill Technical Report which was filed on November 7, 2025 does not include mineral resources nor a target for further exploration that complies with NI 43-101 Guidelines. This is being corrected in a revised NI 43-101 Technical Report to help investors understand the situation at the Bald Hill Deposit.

Investors should not rely on the November 7, 2025, filed technical report until a new technical report is filed on SEDAR+. They may find the statement referring to “Resource” to be misleading. No “Resource”, as defined by NI 43-101 Standards has been identified at Bald Hill and the discussion of potential should not be included in the Section on Resources in the Technical Report as this could be misleading.

A revised Technical Report is being prepared and will be filed on SEDAR+ after review by the British Columbia Securities Commission (BCSC).

Bald Hill November 43-101 Technical Report was prepared for Antimony Resources by John Langton, M.Sc., P. GEO., – JPL GeoServices, Fredericton, New Brunswick, Canada.
