

Critical Metals PLC Debt Restructuring Update

written by Raj Shah | December 13, 2024

December 13, 2024 (Source) – On 11 November 2024 the Company announced that it had reached agreement with its international financial institution to reschedule its payments under its facility agreement dated 13 September 2023 (“Facility Agreement”) to deferred payments to 20 December 2024. NIU Invest has now acquired the rights in that Facility Agreement and £63,600 of convertible loan notes issued to the international financial institution under the convertible loan note instrument issued by the Company dated 09 April 2024. The Company has agreed with NIU the payment of the sums due under the Facility Agreement will be extended until 20 June 2025. The extension contains customary default and cross default provisions. The international financial institution’s security for the Facility Agreement has also been novated to NIU invest. NIU is exploring further funding into CRTM and the Company will update the market in due course.

The Company has also been in discussion with a number of creditors and has reached agreements in principle to reduce the amounts owed and/or convert the amounts owed to equity at a later date. These statements are subject to legally binding agreements being entered into.

Commenting on the strategic Board changes, Russell Fryer, CEO of Critical Metals plc said:

“We are taking significant steps to simplify and restructure our balance sheet, a vital step in aligning our financial position with our strategic goals. This approach will allow us to concentrate our efforts on advancing the Molulu Project ensuring its development remains our primary focus.”
