Since the launch of the first phase two weeks ago to a select group of over 80,000 of Mint’s payroll cardholders, over 25% are now actively using the Mint Mobile App. Of these initial users, about one-third have purchased the mobile top-up product through the Mint Mobile App, with Mint sharing the top-up fees with mobile phone operators. MME is actively educating its cardholder-base on the benefits of using the mobile app which is expected to further bolster these adoption rates.

“The initial response to our mobile app launch has been extremely encouraging. We are aware most of our cardholders are mobile-first internet users and the initial mobile app adoption and usage metrics further validates our roll-out strategy of offering cutting-edge financial services to the underbanked through Mint’s mobile application. It is our vision to create a ubiquitous mobile-enabled fintech platform for the underbanked and the initial market acceptance shows that we are on the right track. This continues our strategy to monetize our captive card holder base by offering them value added financial services. We are also pleased to be receiving favourable reviews from our customers,” states Abdul Razzak Al Abdullah – Chairman & CEO of MME.
