during this third quarter that will help more than double our annual revenues over the coming year,” said Steve Saviuk, Valeo’s CEO. “Our product portfolio now includes 6 core products that are strongly positioned to contribute significantly to our revenue growth. Given the immediate impact of our acquisitions and the organic growth of our existing products, we expect fourth quarter revenues to exceed $11.0 million.”

Commenting on the third quarter 2022 results, Luc Mainville, Senior Vice-President and Chief Financial Officer said, “We have seen our revenues and product mix continue to improve during the third quarter, while continuing to maintain tight control over our expenses and reducing our quarterly loss. The new products added at the end of Q3-22 are already materially impacting both our revenues and margins and will help accelerate our path towards profitability. In addition, the US$30 million non-dilutive term loan secured from Sagard Healthcare Partners has significantly strengthened our balance sheet by providing the capital required to support our operations and working capital requirements for the coming year,” added Mr. Mainville.
